

Tradency is registered as a JFSA investment advisory business

The JFSA notified Tradency last week that they are granting Tradency with an investment advisory business registration. This is another milestone achieved by Tradency, the first auto trading technology provider to receive this seal of approval in Japan.

March 26, 2014 – Tradency, a global technology company and the originator of the Mirror Trader trading concept & services, as of this week, received a formal approval for the investment advisory business registration by the JFSA. Since 2005 the Mirror Trader platform has gained popularity with tens of leading financial institutions due to its technological superiority and advanced procedures. This last milestone, defines mirror trader as a mass market product which has been recognized by brokers, clients and the JFSA as an approved financial tool in Japan.

Tradency alongside its Japanese broker partners had joined forces in order to lead the advisory application process. Lior Nabat Tradency's CEO expands on that subject: "Tradency welcomes the involvement of global regulators. We see the new regulation as a joint interest for the regulators, Tradency, brokers and traders. We believe strong regulation will transform the FX market into a viable financial investment tool. We also see it as an obvious evolutionary step in our evolution into a mass market service."
